Brahmi legend Jaya below the lotus in her hand, TOTGE #18.3.2, very fine, less than 10 coins known, extremely rare. Note: The dies were carved by expert mint masters, most probably on an important occasion to commemorate an event. According to the Rajatarangini, the well-known historical chronicle of Kashmir written by Kalhana in the 12th century AD, Sri Meghavahana was the grandson of Yudhishthira, the son of Bhupaditya, and a ruler of Kashmir. He belonged to a family of Gonaddha. Some scholars believe that Meghavahana was a predecessor of Pravarasena, and some consider the other way around. The Rajatarangini mentions that Meghavahana was followed by Shreshthasena, who was succeeded by Hiranya. When Hiranya died, a usurper named Matrigupta assumed the throne of Kashmir with the help of Vikramaditya of Ujjaini. Pravarasena, the nephew of Hiranya, marched to Kashmir and defeated Matrigupta. Later on, Pravarasena became a great king who founded a city. The history of this period is not very clear in the chronicle, but this coin remains the sole testimony to the historical existence of a king named Meghavahana.

Note: Parikshit Narayan, the eldest son of Raghudev, succeeded his father as the King of Cooch in 1603. His reign was characterized by a protracted conflict with his cousin, Lakshmi Narayan, the ruler of the Western Cooch kingdom. The conflict escalated when Lakshmi Narayan sought assistance from the Mughal Empire, prompting a Mughal invasion of Parikshit Narayan's realm in 1612. Parikshit Narayan's forces were defeated by the Mughals during the campaign of 1612-1613. Subsequently, his kingdom was annexed, and he was taken prisoner to the Mughal Emperor in Delhi. He passed away in 1616 while undertaking a pilgrimage to Tribeni.

Lot: 443

Tripura Kingdom, Vijaya Manikya (SE 1454-1485, 1532-1564 AD), 'Ardhanarishwara' type, Citing Queen Lakshmi, Silver Tanka, 11.35 gms, SE 1482, Commemoration Issue, Obv. Lakshya Snayi/ Sri Sri Tripura Ma/hesh Vijay Mani/kya Deva Sri Lakshmi/ Rani Devyah with scallop borders around, R&B #123, KM #67, extremely fine for the type, very clear & bold depiction of Ardhanarishwara, very rare. Note: It is very very rare to find an Ardhanarishwara type with this quality, which is centrally struck with bold and high relief on the obverse. The silver Rupee coins depicting Ardhanarishwara were issued to commemorate a sacred "Lakshya Snayi" (bather in the Lakshya) ritual bath that Vijaya Manikya performed in the River Lakhi, a tributary of the Brahmaputra. This bath occurred during a successful military raid into the Muslim territory of Bengal, making the coin a commemorative issue for both a significant military victory and an associated religious rite. The representation of the Shiva-Durga form of Ardhanarishvara likely indicated the king's personal devotion to these deities. The specific depiction, which combined the ten-handed Durga on a lion and the four-handed Shiva on a bull on a single coin face, was considered an ingenious concept and a novel contribution in the history of Indian coinage and iconography, previously unknown in the region.

Jalalaldin Muhammad Akbar Badshah Ghazi with date & khalid allah Taa'la around, mint name below zarb Dhaka, 3-4 specimen known till date, very fine+, extremely rare. Note: Towards the end of Akbar's reign, his trusted general, Raja Man Singh of Amber, was appointed the governor of Bengal to quell the rebellion of 'Isa Khan, a powerful Bengali Muslim landholder who had been challenging Mughal authority in East Bengal for some time. In the course of his campaign, Man Singh captured Dhaka in 1602 and established it as his base. He resided in Dhaka until early 1605, when, upon learning of Akbar's final illness, he returned to Agra. Akbar passed away on October 27, 1605, corresponding to 14 Jumada 2, AH 1014. Note: Lakshmi Narayan, the son of Nara Narayan, was an ineffectual ruler. In 1596 AD, he declared himself a vassal of the Mughal Empire, a decision that caused considerable unrest and popular disgust among his subjects. This volatile situation ultimately led him to the Mughal governor in Dacca, where he was subsequently detained for a period of four years. Numismatically, his coinage largely mirrors that of his father, with the notable exception of a significantly higher production volume of Half-Tankas. The coin in question represents one of only four known specimens featuring this specific decorative border type; notably, each of the four extant coins possesses a unique number of arches in its respective border. This particular choice specimen is considered exceedingly rare and is absent from the vast majority of North Eastern coin collections.

Note: The dies were carved by expert mint masters, most probably on an important occasion to commemorate an event. According to the Rajatarangini, the well-known historical chronicle of Kashmir written by Kalhana in the 12th century AD, Sri Meghavahana was the grandson of Yudhishtira, the son of Bhupaditya, and a ruler of Kashmir. He belonged to a family of Gonaddha. Some scholars believe that Meghavahana was a predecessor of Pravarasena, and some consider the other way around. The Rajatarangini mentions that Meghavahana was followed by Shreshthasena, who was succeeded by Hiranya. When Hiranya died, a usurper named Matrigupta assumed the throne of Kashmir with the help of Vikramaditya of Ujjaini. Pravarasena, the nephew of Hiranya, marched to Kashmir and defeated Matrigupta. Later on, Pravarasena became a great king who founded a city. The history of this period is not very clear in the chronicle, but this coin remains the sole testimony to the historical existence of a king named Meghavahana.

Note: Jalal-ud-din's use of the lion motif was likely a deliberate political strategy, leveraging the animal as a symbol of sovereignty to project his might and dominance over rivals. The coinage from his second reign initially maintained the established style until the year AH 824, when the notable "lion tankas" were introduced. This series is often considered the most remarkable in Bengal Sultanate's numismatic history. Although various theories exist regarding the adoption of the lion, primarily connecting it to traditional ideas of kingship and authority, the motif's influence continued, appearing on the currency of two successive Bengal Sultans and the rulers of Tripura.

Bengal Sultanate, Jalal ud-din Fath Shah (AH 886-893/1481-1486 AD), Silver Nazarana Tanka, 10.53 gms, Khazana Mint, AH 890, 'Qadam Rasool' type, Obv. Al shaikh al-mujawar li-Qadam al-Rasool Jalal ud-dunya wa ud-din Abu'al-Muzaffar Fatah shah al-Sultan ibn Mahmud Shah al-Sultan, Rev. al-Sultan al-Munawar ba-Noor al-Mustafawi Ilahi al-Mukhatib Sultan al-zahideen fi al-Yaqat ba-Mushahidah, within decorative ornate border, G&G #B627, very large flan, sharp strike with a very high relief & no test mark or shroff marks, extremely fine, extremely rare. Note: In the realm of Bengal coinage, coins bearing religious inscriptions are infrequent, particularly those struck during the brief reign of Jalal al-Din Fath Shah. There are, however, uncertainties regarding the legends reported by G&G, specifically concerning the latter part of the reverse inscription. These inscriptions unequivocally refer to the 'Qadam-i Rasool,' or the Prophet's footprint, with the Sultan identifying himself as the Mujawar (close servant or companion) of the associated shrine. The practice of venerating alleged imprints of the Prophet on rocks, though not embraced by Orthodox Islam, led to the establishment of shrines around such marks, reflecting parallels to "footprint worship" found in pre-Islamic traditions like Buddhism and Vaishnavism. Fath Shah's self-depiction as a 'servant' and 'Shaykh' at the shrine highlights his personal piety and alignment with a less orthodox interpretation of Islam. While several mints issued coins with these specific legends, they remain exceptionally rare. Coins originating from the 'Khazana' mint, such as the one described, are notable for their wide flans and decorative borders encircling the inscriptions. This distinctiveness suggests they may have been produced for special events, potentially the inauguration of the shrine in 1485.

Bengal Sultanate, Ala al-din Husain Shah (AH 899-925, 1493-1519 AD), First Victory Commemoration Type, Silver Tanka, 10.73 gms, Dar al-Darb Mint, AH 900, Obv. Al sultan al mutawwaqil ala allah al-fath al-kamru wa'alkamta bi-inayat allah ala al-dunya wa'al din abu al Muzaffar husain shah al sultan fath kamta, Rev. kalima shahada with mint name & date, multifoil decorative borders, centrally struck, extremely fine with a very high relief, rare. Note: Ala al-din Husain Shah of the Bengal Sultanate achieved a significant victory over the Kamata Kingdom (Kamru and Kamta) in a war that culminated in 1498 AD with the defeat and imprisonment of the last Khen King, Nilambar. All Tanka dated AH 900 were likely struck to commemorate the conquest of Kamta and Kamru. However, the Bengal Sultanate's rule over Kamata and Kamrup was very short-lived, lasting less than a decade. A confederation of local Assamese chieftains (Baro-Bhuyans) rose in revolt, capturing and killing the Governor of Kamta, Shahzada Danyal (Husain Shah's eldest son), and his officers. This effectively ended the Sultanate's direct control over the area within a decade (around 1509 AD). The region then experienced an interregnum until the rise of the Cooch dynasty.

Aurangzeb was the first Mughal ruler to extend the Mughal territory into southern India. He spent the entire second half of his reign planning and plotting against the Deccan rulers. He personally led the attack on Bijapur sultanate with an army of over one lakh. Mughals finally managed to capture Bijapur in 1686 AD. When Aurangzeb captured Bijapur capital in 12th September 1686, the fort of Adoni was controlled by Siddi Maud a powerful governor of the Adil Shahi Sultanate and once a regent of Sultan Sikandar Adil Shah. After stepping down as regent of Bijapur in 1683 due to internal political instability, he retired to Adoni and ruled it with a high degree of autonomy.

Aurangzeb's primary objective was the complete annexation of the Bijapur Sultanate to the Mughal Empire and after capturing the Bijapur capital Aurangzeb set sight on various forts and territories under Bijapur rule, including Adoni. Aurangzeb despatched a powerful army to attack the fort of Adoni. An army led by Maharaja Anup Singh of Bikaner and Firoz Jung after a year long battle were finally able to subdue Siddi Masud who surrendered and later joined the Mughal forces. After the capture of the fort of Adoni coins were struck to commemorate the event and the fort and the surrounding area was renamed Imtiazgadh. Coins with this mint name were issued only for a year with all subsequent coins being struck with the mint name as Imtiazgadh making these coins very rare. The coins with the epithet Dar Ul Zafar – Advani are even more rare.

Lot: 378

Assam, Mlechchha Dynasty, Harjaravarman (815-832 AD), Bell Metal Unit, 3.15 gms, 'Ha' initials, uniface, extremely fine, very rare. Harjaravarman was a powerful and influential ruler who governed from his capital at Harruppesvara (modern-day Tezpur). He significantly consolidated the borders and administration of his kingdom, a legacy sealed by the issuance of the notable Tezpur rock edict. His reign marked a pivotal shift in the dynasty's political status and independence, as he was the first monarch to assume grand imperial titles such as Maharaja-Dhiraja, Parameswara, and Parama Bhattacharya. To further legitimize his rule within the mainstream Indian political and social framework, Harjaravarman was also the first ruler in his lineage to have his accession ceremony conducted with full Vedic rites. Beyond administration and statecraft, he was a prolific builder and patron of public works: • He commissioned the construction of a temple dedicated to Hetuka Sulin (a form of Shiva) at Harruppesvara. • He oversaw the excavation of a large and significant tank known as the Harjjara Pukuri or Hazarapukhuri in Tezpur, which remains in existence today.

Estimate: ₹20000 - ₹30000

Lot: 379

Assam, Mlechchha Dynasty, Tyagasimha (890-900 AD), Heavy Bell Metal Unit, 19.30 gms, 'Ta', in Brahmi, letter attributed to Tyagasimha, extremely fine, very rare. Note: Tyagasimha was the last known ruler of the Mlechchha dynasty, which ruled the ancient kingdom of Kamarupa (present-day Assam) from approximately 650 to 900 AD. After Tyagasimha's death without an heir, the Mlechchha dynasty came to an end. The local people then chose Brahmapala, leading to the establishment of the subsequent Pala dynasty of Kamarupa after 900 AD. "Mlechchha" was a generic term used in ancient Indian texts to denote foreigners, "barbarians" or people of non-Vedic origins, much like the Greek "barbaros". This suggests the rulers were likely indigenous tribal chiefs (possibly of Bodo-Kachari or Mech origin) who were considered outsiders to mainstream Indo-Aryan society before their integration into the political landscape. Estimate: ₹10000 - ₹150000

Note: Rajeshwara Simha used Devanagari legends on some of his coinage due to the increasing influence of Brahmanical culture and Hinduism within the Ahom kingdom, which led to the adoption of the Sanskrit language and the associated Assamese-Bengali & Devanagari script for official purposes, including coinage. The legends on the coins typically invoked Hindu deities, such as Lord Shiva and his consort Goddess Gauri (Parvati). Using Sanskrit in the local script served to emphasize the king's devotion and reinforce the Hindu identity of the kingdom. He also issued coins with Persian script, reflecting Mughal influence in other areas.

In 1596 AD, he declared himself a vassal of the Mughal Empire, a decision that caused considerable unrest and popular disgust among his subjects. This volatile situation ultimately led him to the Mughal governor in Dacca, where he was subsequently detained for a period of four years. Numismatically, his coinage largely mirrors that of his father, with the notable exception of a significantly higher production volume of Half-Tankas. The coin in question represents one of only four known specimens featuring this specific decorative border type; notably, each of the four extant coins possesses a unique number of arches in its respective border. This particular choice specimen is considered exceedingly rare and is absent from the vast majority of North Eastern coin collections.

His reign was characterized by a protracted conflict with his cousin, Lakshmi Narayan, the ruler of the Western Cooch kingdom. The conflict escalated when Lakshmi Narayan sought assistance from the Mughal Empire, prompting a Mughal invasion of Parikshit Narayan's realm in 1612. Parikshit Narayan's forces were defeated by the Mughals during the campaign of 1612-1613. Subsequently, his kingdom was annexed, and he was taken prisoner to the Mughal Emperor in Delhi. Sri Sri Ja/yantipura Pu/randarasya Sa/ke 1630, KM #160, extremely fine, extremely rare. Note: Jaya Narayan succeeded his father, Ram Simha I, who died as a captive of the Ahoms. His father had been at war with the Ahom kingdom after kidnapping the Raja of Kachhar. Consequently, the Ahom King had raided Jaintiapur in 1707 AD, just before Jaya Narayan's rule began. Hence, Jaya Narayan's succession likely marked a period of managing these strained inter-kingdom relations. Jaya Narayan's reign, and the broader history of Jaintiapur, were marked by regional power struggles. Like other Jaintia kings of the period, Jaya Narayan ruled from a winter capital at Jaintiapur (now in Bangladesh) in the plains and a summer capital at Nartiang in the Jaintia Hills. Jaya Narayan was succeeded by Bargosain II. Estimate: ₹30000 - ₹40000

Note: Jatra Narayan, the 19th ruler of the Jaintia dynasty, was the son of Ram Singh I and the nephew of the previous ruler, Chattra Simha. He assumed the throne after his father's death, which occurred while Ram Singh I was a captive of the Ahom kingdom. The Jaintia Kingdom came into contact with the British East India Company during Jatra Narayan's reign. The British were interested in the region's lime quarries, the primary source of supply for the Bengal delta region. However, interactions were not smooth, and the British began isolating the Jaintias through a system of forts and regulations. Estimate: ₹25000 - ₹30000

Note: Dhanya Manikya was a prominent and powerful ruler of the Manikya dynasty in Tripura. His reign, approximately from 1490 to 1515 AD, was distinguished by significant military expansion, architectural contributions, and administrative reforms, leading many to consider him one of the dynasty's leading figures. His wife was Queen Kamala. He named a large water body, Kamalasagar, in front of a temple he constructed in her honor, and many of his coins also bore her name. Dhanya Manikya reportedly died from smallpox in 1515 AD, after which his queen performed the ritual of Sati.

Lakshya Snayi/ Sri Sri Tripura Ma/hesh Vijay Mani/kya Deva Sri Lakshmi/ Rani Devyah with scallop borders around, R&B #123, KM #67, extremely fine for the type, very clear & bold depiction of Ardhanarishwara, very rare. Note: It is very very rare to find an Ardhanarishwara type with this quality, which is centrally struck with bold and high relief on the obverse. The silver Rupee coins depicting Ardhanarishwara were issued to commemorate a sacred "Lakshya Snayi" (bather in the Lakshya) ritual bath that Vijaya Manikya performed in the River Lakhi, a tributary of the Brahmaputra. This bath occurred during a successful military raid into the Muslim territory of Bengal, making the coin a commemorative issue for both a significant military victory and an associated religious rite. The representation of the Shiva-Durga form of Ardhanarishwara likely indicated the king's personal devotion to these deities. The specific depiction, which combined the ten-handed Durga on a lion and the four-handed Shiva on a bull on a single coin face, was considered an ingenious concept and a novel contribution in the history of Indian coinage and iconography, previously unknown in the region.

Note : This mohur is exceptionally rare, being both unique and previously unpublished. It is of particular note as a similar rupee is catalogued in R&B #259. The coin is being offered at an Indian auction for the very first time, having previously been part of Triton Sale XXII in the USA. Rajadharma Manikya II ruled the Kingdom of Tripura from 1785 until his death in 1806. He formally ascended the throne after a transitional period of regency managed by his mother, Queen Jahnvi Rani Mahadevayu, which had commenced on July 11, 1785. His reign occurred during a pivotal era when the sovereign Kingdom of Tripura had already transitioned into a princely state under British influence, having entered a subsidiary alliance in 1761. Consequently, the scope of his executive authority was that of a ruler within a princely state operating under the overarching British paramountcy, rather than that of a fully independent monarch. It is important for historical accuracy to distinguish this ruler from his namesake predecessor: Rajdhara Manikya I, who reigned significantly earlier, from approximately 1586 to 1600 CE, and notably issued coins with his queen, Satyavati Mahadevi. The two monarchs presided over the state of Tripura in distinctly different historical contexts.

Note: The gold coins of Bajranggarh are exceedingly rare, known to cataloguers by only four recorded examples. These include an octagonal piece sold at a 2007 international auction, a round piece in the National Numismatic Collection of the USA, an ex-mount coin offered at an Indian auction & another similar specimen with RY 18 sold in Oswal auction for 25Lakh Rupees earlier this year. Struck for ceremonial purposes rather than widespread circulation, their scarcity is attributed to this limited production. During the reign of Jai Singh, Bajranggarh was elevated to his primary residence after his ancestral home, Raghogarh, was threatened by the Sindhia. A ruler of distinct vision, Jai Singh issued coins of remarkable design. These bore inscriptions exclusively in Nagari script and professed allegiance to no one except the Lord Hanuman. The issuance of these unique coins ceased in 1816, when the Sindhia's general, Jean-Baptiste Filose, sacked Bajranggarh, forcing Jai Singh to spend his final years as a fugitive.

Dhrangadhra State, Rai Singh Jhala, (the ruler of Halwad), In the name of Akbar, Murid Rai Singh, Silver Kori, 4.65 gms, Obv. Kalima Shahada. Rev. Jalal-al-din Muhammad Akbar Badshah Ghazi & Nagari legends "murid Rai Singh below seen partially, Unlisted, Uncirculated with underlying lustre, Sharply struck, extremely rare. Note: It was previously believed that Rao Raydhanji II of Kutch issued a specific coin on which he declared himself a 'Murid' (disciple) of a Sufi saint. This theory is implausible because the coin is struck in the name of the Mughal Emperor Akbar, and nearly 200 years separated Raydhanji from Akbar. It is more likely that the "Rai Singh" who struck these coins is Raisingh Jhala, the ruler of Halwad (Dhrangadhra). In 1566, during the third year of his reign, Raisingh was reportedly fatally wounded at the Battle of Malia, and his infant son, Chandrasingh, was proclaimed king. However, Raisingh appears to have survived the battle, as he is known to have had an audience with Akbar approximately 20 years later at Fatehpur Sikri. After securing Akbar's confidence, Raisingh returned to Halwad and, between January and March 1585, regained the throne from Chandrasingh with the help of Abdur Rahim Khan, the governor of Gujarat. The time he spent at Akbar's court had a long-term impact on his subsequent reign. When Muzaffar III rebelled, the local rulers of Kathiawad formed alliances with the warring parties. Jam Satrasal (Sataji) of Nawanagar allied with Amin Khan Ghorī, the de facto ruler of Junagadh during the revolt, and both were believed to be supporters of Muzaffar III. In contrast, Raisingh Jhala accepted Mughal sovereignty and took the side of the Mughals. Raisingh Jhala's subservience is emphasized on these coins by the word "murid," which translates to "a servant" or "disciple."

Any claim of lack of authenticity must be made in writing by the original purchaser immediately after discovery that an item is not authentic, and upon making such a claim Jain Auction House shall, in its sole and absolute discretion, reserve the right to consult and rely upon any expert(s) or authority considered by him reliable in establishing the authenticity of that lot. If the lot is then proved not authentic then the original purchaser must immediately return the lot to Jain Auction House in the same condition as at the time of the auction with the original Invoice and payment proof.
